

South Georgia

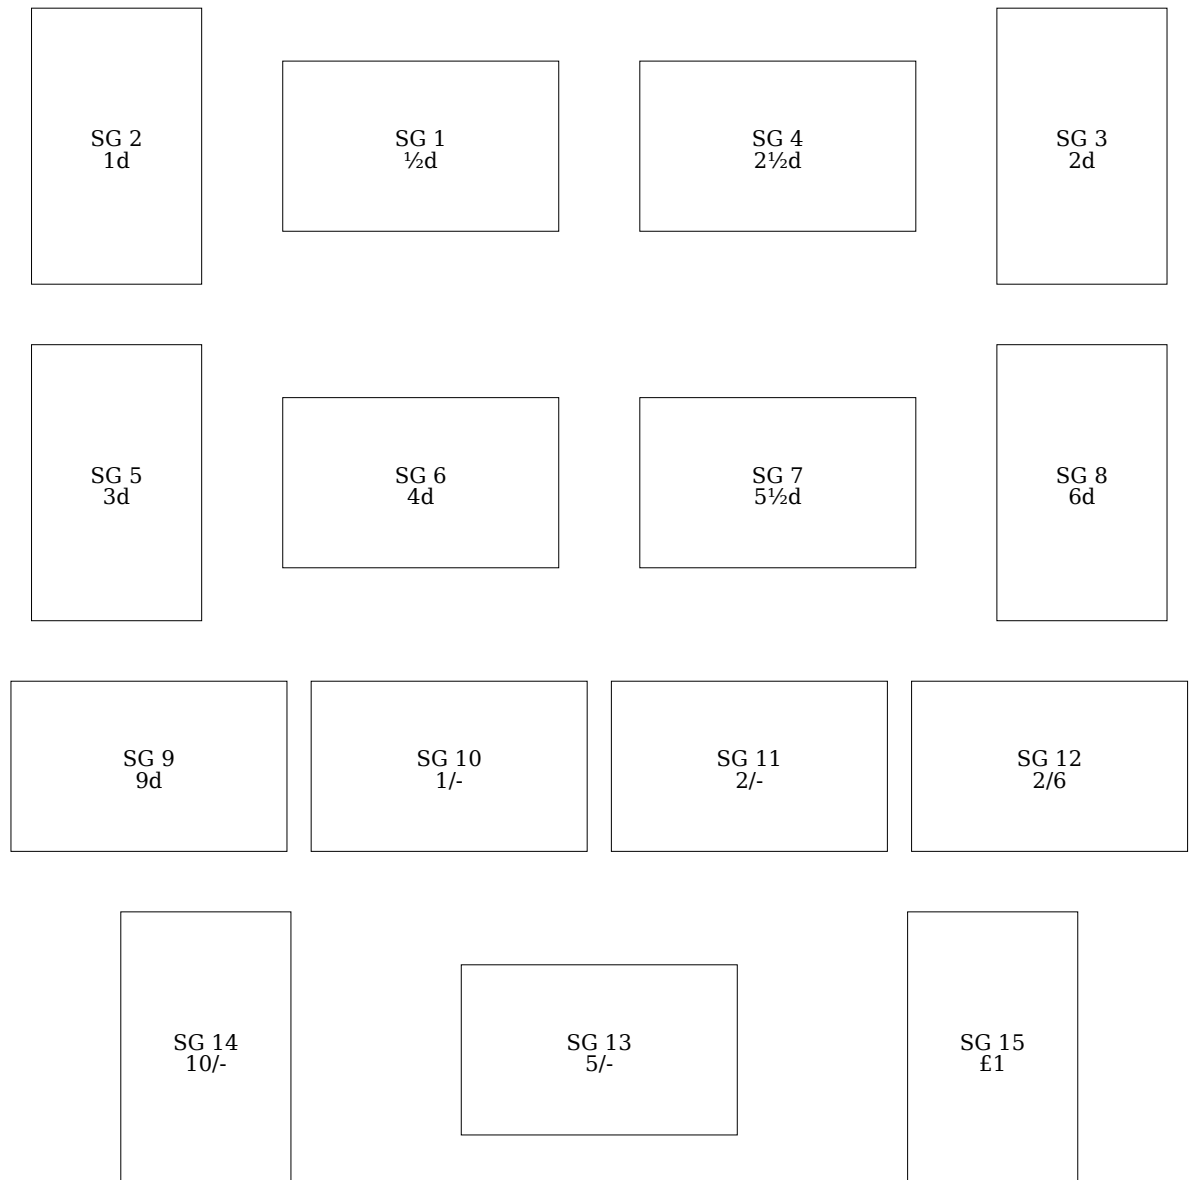

The new international legal regime introduced in the Antarctic territory south of 60° south latitude by the 1961 Antarctic Treaty prompted Britain to separate the part of the Falkland Islands Dependencies that became subject to the Treaty.

This was done by a 1962 Order in Council that established the British Antarctic Territory, leaving in the Dependencies only the island groups of South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, including Shag Rocks and Clerke Rocks.

Between 1961 and 1980 stamps labelled 'South Georgia' were used, reverting to the name 'Falkland Islands Dependencies' in 1980.
